Trip Report

Mount Becher (snowshoeing) return to Reports list

Thu Jan 22, 2015

 Leader: Glenn Ord

Co-Leader:

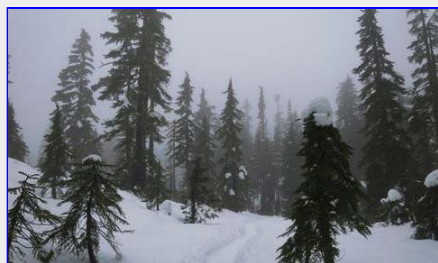

Despite the foggy weather and prospect of rain, we had an enthusiastic group of nine for the Mt Becher trip. With this year's low snowfall, we walked up a ways until we could put on our snowshoes. We spotted blue skies, but they did not persist (a "sucker hole"). One of our participants ran out of gas on the way up, so Sheila accompanied him back down the trail to the cars. The rest of the group went as far as a Boston Lake overlook for lunch and then we decided to head down as well. On the way back, Raelene took us on a nice detour to inspect a cabin built by snowboarders. The cabin looked pretty good inside and out. We then descended on an alternate route down back to the cars. We might have been slightly disappointed that the fog had persisted and that we didn't get up to the upper meadows, but we were all happy to get out and to do some interesting exploration, with no shortage of conversation. The rain had held off; all in all, it was a good day out.
